People from communities across the nation are gathering to talk about the current state of public affairs by using the dialogue resource, A House Divided: What Would We Have to Give Up to Get the Political System We Want? As Americans lose confidence in our national institutions, people are finding it harder and harder to even talk with one another. Many are worried about our republic's democracy.

Join us as we come together with elected officials, journalists, and community members in small-group dialogue. Combined with outcomes from several hundred forums throughout 2019, the public's voice will be shared with local, state, and federal leaders.

We look forward to joining with representatives of our community for a civil discussion of how we can begin to work together to solve our most urgent problems. Please write us with any questions: commongrounds@palmschurch.org.
